

Below you will find the weekly update for the SR-201 paving and barrier project in Salt Lake City. The information below provides details regarding the work that is projected to occur next week.

Work continues on SR-201 in Salt Lake City between I-80 and 9200 West. Motorists can expect construction crews in the area on Friday, September 1 with work resuming again on Tuesday, September 5 between the hours of 3 a.m. to 9 p.m. During construction motorists can expect uneven and rough pavement in the project area.

The construction crews will be working on the following activities next week:

- Paving is expected to be completed by September 2.
- Traffic will continue to be shifted for utility and shoulder work, sign installation, and striping operations that will occur throughout the project area.
- Construction crews will continue removing and installing new barrier and guardrail throughout the corridor.

Motorists should expect up to a maximum of 15 minute delays during work hours. Traffic will be impacted during construction times:

- During morning peak hours Monday through Friday (6 a.m. to 9 a.m.) two lanes of traffic will be open going eastbound on SR-201.
- During evening peak hours Monday through Friday (3 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.) two lanes of traffic will be open going westbound on SR-201.
- During off peak hours there will be one lane of road open in each direction.
